

When I was little girl I grew up in a large family of siblings where although we thrived in the chaos and felt comfort in the company, we all strived for attention. I needed to find my voice and to be heard. Fast forward to the age of 15, I picked up the guitar and started writing songs and at 21 began to hone my painting skills. I have struggled with feeling less than because I am self taught but now at 41 I feel a sense of pride in it. I treat my art like another one of my children, nurturing her, helping her to grow as time goes by. Come and visit my mountain studio, I will be showcasing my new and old works and playing some original tunes.
